

UCLA Summer Programs for Undergraduate Research 2006

Juniors, Seniors and Cal State University Predocs...

Planning on Pursuing an Academic Career?

Gain research experience working one-on-one with a faculty member this summer. Programs participants will receive a stipend, room, board in one of the UCLA residence halls, and transportation costs.

The Programs

The explicit objectives of the UCLA Summer Programs for Undergraduate Research (SPUR) are to help prepare, motivate, encourage, and support those students who aspire to obtain a Ph.D. and pursue an academic career in teaching and research. The programs offer upper-division undergraduate students and California State University Sally Casanova Pre-Doctoral Scholars the opportunity to work individually with faculty mentors on research projects in virtually all academic disciplines. Participants will attend workshops and seminars on academic career opportunities, standardized test preparation, writing and research skills, and strategies for enhancing success in applying to graduate school.

Eligibility

Applicants must be U.S. citizens or permanent residents, entering their junior or senior year during the 2006-2007 academic year who will not graduate before March of 2007, and have a cumulative minimum GPA of 2.80. See the web site for eligibility requirements for specific programs.

Students who intend to pursue professional graduate degrees in law (JD), management (MBA), medicine (MD), or dentistry (DDS) are not eligible for these programs.
